Early 19th Century Danish Black Painted Secretary Bureau

Late 18th-century Danish bureau or secretary featuring a newer professionally applied black layered painted finish, lightly distressed to reveal natural oak beneath and suit the age of the piece. The interior is painted a contrasting pale blue. The desktop opens on hinges to reveal six drawers for storage and organization. Crafted in both oak (front) and pine (drawer sides/bottoms) which was the traditional method of the era. The lower section features three large Rococo-style curved drawers, each fitted with two brass pulls. The secretary rests on bun feet and has simple carved panels along the sides. Typical cracks, nicks, and age-related separation (in particular drawer bottoms and back) are present throughout from generations of use.

The upper cabinet door retains a key, though the lock functions stiffly. While the same key seems to fit the desk, it is best used as a pull only as this lock presents difficulty opening.

Restored strong, stable, and ready for use. Photos of back reveal old repairs, some signs of old dried (inactive) wormholes. Please refer to professional photos for clear understanding of color, condition, and details; photo lighting, individual monitor display and home lighting all impact how item is viewed. Photos are part of item description, please ask questions or request additional photos of specific areas if needed.
