19th Century Rustic Hungarian Long Work Table

19th century Hungarian worktable, crafted in pine. The base retains its original light blue painted finish, now naturally distressed from generations of use. Metal rods and bolts provide additional support throughout the base and contribute to the sturdy utilitarian character. Just under 10' long.

The contrasting natural pine top shows much distress with gouges, cracks, nicks, stains, age related separation between the planks, and other signs of wear visible throughout the top. The base and painted finish also show distress, nicks, and wear from continued use. One side of the table reveals holes in the leg, indicating something was once attached there and later removed.

Restored, strong, stable, and ready to use as a console, work table, serving table, or rustic kitchen island.
