19th Century Danish Painted Baroque Library Writing Table Console

This handsome baroque oak library table with one central drawer has handsome legs and an attractive back stretcher allowing for a chair if desired in the front.

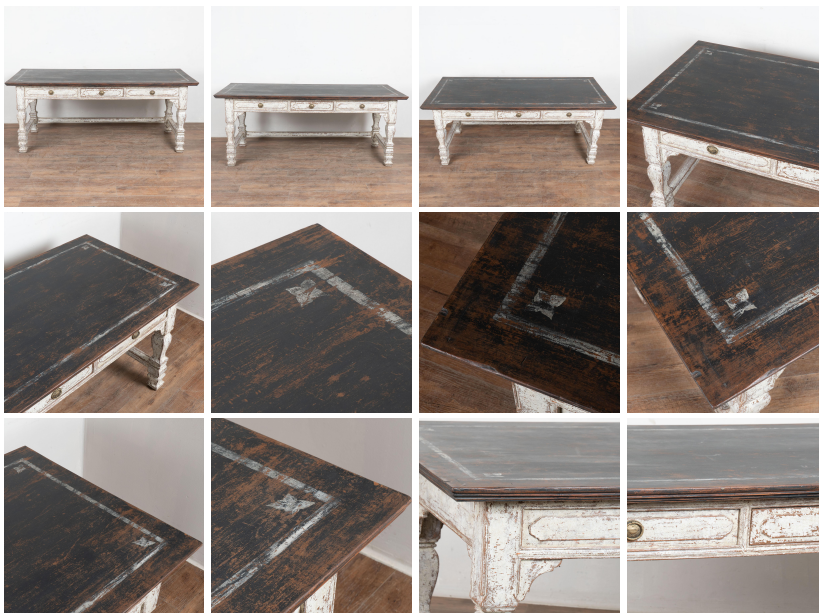

The base has been given a newer, professionally applied layered antique white painted finish and is lightly distressed revealing the natural wood below while the contrasting black painted top has a border complimenting the base.

Note only the central drawer functions, what appears as drawers flanking it are simply "false fronts" adding to the design.

Floor to skirt height: 24.25"

All scratches, cracks, dings (along top), and age related separation are reflective of age and do not detract from the appeal nor function of this handsome table.
