19th Century Swedish Original Hand-Painted Pine Bowfront Corner Cabinet

Swedish bowfront corner cabinet crafted in pine, retaining its original hand-painted finish and traditional country character. The warm faux wood painted background features shades of brown with subtle undertones of orange and red, while the curved paneled doors are decorated with red flowers and green leaves against a rich ochre background.

The graceful bowfront design gives this corner cabinet a clean silhouette, with curved doors and contrasting black trim along the lower front. An open display surface separates the upper and lower portions, offering an attractive area for displaying pottery, decorative objects, or other collections.

The cabinet doors open using a simple rotating metal latch, revealing an interior painted in a contrasting creamy mint color. The upper interior includes one full shelf and an additional curved shelf above. A small hole is visible in the upper right corner of the cabinet top.

Generations of use are reflected in the naturally distressed original painted finish, with scratches, gouges, and worn areas throughout. The open display surface shows particularly noticeable wear. Nicks, cracks, and old repairs are visible along the curved black lower trim, including one small missing section of wood. Age related separation between planks is present along both sides, while the interior painted surface displays considerable distress.

Constructed in 2 sections for easier transportation and installation, this cabinet has been restored and is stable and ready to use. A charming example of Swedish country craftsmanship, combining original folk art decoration with practical display and storage.
