Late 18th Century French Bleached Oak Chest of Three Drawers with Floral Carving

Late 18th century French chest of three drawers crafted in oak with a beautifully bleached finish that highlights the natural wood grain and intricate carved details. The lighter finish lends a fresh, understated elegance to this antique chest while preserving the warmth and character of its centuries-old construction.

Each of the three drawers is embellished with decorative carving, while the gracefully scalloped lower skirt features floral vine carving centered around a shell motif. Carved cabriole feet and gently curved canted sides further enhance the elegant French silhouette. Attractive oversized drawer pulls provide a decorative finishing touch.

Traditional wooden peg construction is visible throughout, reflecting the craftsmanship of the period. The drawers open to reveal signs of age related separation along portions of the interior bottoms and drawer fronts.

More than two centuries of use are reflected in the aged oak surface. Numerous old cracks and areas of staining are visible across the top, with additional staining throughout the chest. The left side displays staining and a crack near the upper left corner, while the right side has a crack near the upper right corner. Further cracking is visible along the rear leg sections.

Residual evidence of old dried wormhole activity is present throughout, particularly along the right side and other areas of the oak. This activity is no longer active and does not impact function. These signs of age contribute to the authentic character of the chest.

Restored, stable, and ready to use. A graceful example of late 18th century French craftsmanship, combining decorative carving, practical drawer storage, and the soft appearance of bleached oak.
