Late 18th Century Danish Black Painted Pine Chest of Three Drawers

Late 18th century Danish chest of three drawers crafted in pine with a newer black painted finish that has been lightly distressed to complement the age and character of the piece. Areas of natural pine are visible beneath the painted surface, creating a subtle contrast against the dark finish.

Decorative carved dentil molding accents the upper edge, while simple carved details frame the vertical sides. The lower skirt features geometric carving with alternating squares and diamonds, adding architectural interest to the substantial chest. Four tapered feet support the traditional Danish form.

Each of the three drawers opens using two brass ring pulls. The upper drawer features three divided storage compartments, providing convenient organization for smaller belongings. Heavy hand-wrought iron handles are mounted on the sides, reflecting the chest's substantial construction and allowing for easier handling during transportation and installation.

Generations of use are reflected in cracks, scratches, nicks, and areas of wear throughout, including across the top and sides. An old repair is visible at the upper left corner of top. The interior of the top drawer displays considerable staining, with additional staining present in the other two drawers. Residual signs of old dried wormhole activity are visible but are no longer active and do not impact function. These details are consistent with the age and history of the chest.

Restored, stable, and ready to use. A handsome example of late 18th century

Danish craftsmanship, combining decorative carving, practical storage, and a versatile black painted finish.
